Superfex Oil Burning Refrigerator

Many of these oil burning refrigerators are in use in tropical countries as well as in rural homes in this country. The burners are lit only a short time each day, go out automatically after operating about two hours to create ample refrigeration to last 24 to 36 hours.

Requiring no outside connection of any kind and having no moving parts to wear out or cause trouble, these refrigerators are being successfully used in all parts of the world, including remote sections of Africa, India, the Philippine Islands, Central America, and other tropical countries.

An exclusive feature which is said to make these refrigerators effective even under the most severe conditions is the cooling system; that is, the condenser, which provides both water and air cooling. Water is used in the condenser tank in much the same way as it is used in automobile engines.

The refrigerators freeze 40 or more ice cubes at a time, the quantity varying with the different models.

Appomattox Having A Building Boom

New Residences, Business Place and Improvements Under Way Here

Appomattox is experiencing a building boom. Mayhap it's the 3 in order to be eligible to vote effervescence of Spring, or perchance just an expression of in the general election in November. eternal confidence in the town's future, but A special appeal is being made by turn around town finds carpenters and building craftsmen busy.

Across the street from the Times Virginian, on of of the town's most valuable lots, a handsome new service station is under construction. Hundreds of loads of dirt and rock are being used to bing the lot up to the street level. The foundation for the station has been completed and the framework raised. When finished it will handle Texaco products.

J. O. Babcock, a retired minister, well known here, is having a modern home built adjacent to the old tobacco property. This home, made of brick and frime materials, will be ready for occupancy in a few more weeks.

Long an eye-sore to the beauty of Appomattox, the old abandoned tobacco warehouse, reminder of the "days when", is being torn down by the new owner of the property, P. L. Murphy. He plans to build several residences on the site, transforming into one of Appomattox's most attractive residential corners.

These building indicate a tendency to "do something" about the long apparent building shortage in Appomattox.

Dr. D. A. Christian has recently completed a new front porch at his residence, L. Crawley is adding a new upstairs room, H. G. Johnson's home is being painted and plans are being made for improvements at the Baptist parsonage.

In addition to the "building boom" many residents are being inspired by spring weather to give attention to flower gardens and other means of making their premises attractive.

JUNIOR—SENIOR BANQUET

Friday, April 17 was a gala night for the juniors and seniors of the local high school. The old dining room of the dormitory echoed with gaiety as 85 juniors and seniors trooped down to find places at the banquet table for the first junior and senior banquet held here in years.

Solemnity reigned as toasts were given, beginning with a toast to the seniors by Wylie Richardson, president of the junior class, with a response by Marvin Godsey, president of the student body. Next Virginia Cralle, chairman of the social group gave a toast to the faculty and Mrs. Helene Welch responded. But the solemnity disappeared with the bursts of mirth which followed the reading of fortunes prepared for each guest.

The room was decorated with pink and silver, the senior colors, and the placecards carried out the theme "Shipmates Forever." Flowers used for decoration, were apple blossoms, dogwood, redbud and bridal wreaths and flowering almonds.

Members of the faculty who least their presence to the scene were: Mrs. Helene Welch, Misses Mary Butts, Elisabeth McDearmon, Lucy LeGrand and John Childress and Virgil H. Gill.

Contributors to the entertainment were Misses Faye Stratton, Edith Swith, Doris Lucado and Pat Sears.

The delicious dinner was planned and prepared by Misses Kate O'Brien and Elaine McDearmon.

Funeral services were held at the Rocks church, conducted by the Rev. R. T. Smith, assisted by the Revs. W. M. Black, G. C. Chocklett and T. E. Good.

The Appomattox Chapter of the U. D. C. assisted at commitment service.
